As Thanksgiving approaches, we all have many things to be thankful for including our family, friends and being able to be an active part of the legal community. As attorneys, we should be thankful for the privilege and the responsibility that goes with being an Attorney and Counselor at Law.

As a foot patrolman of the Baltimore City Police Department, I was to many people in my patrol area, the government, the authority, their protector and their friend and also regularly called on by these people to give them advice and direction and occasionally to deliver a baby. These people looked to me as someone they could depend on who would give them the right advice which would help them in their lives. The majority of my fellow officers took this responsibility very seriously; however, there were some who totally cast their duty aside because they did not want to make the extra effort to do their job the right way.

There was a time when on every attorney's card and in many windows it read "Attorney and Counselor at Law." In a legal career, an attorney may counsel hundreds or maybe thousands of clients in all aspects of life and in each case, these people seek his or her legal advice, expecting it to be professional and intelligently rendered. Whether we are providing a free consultation or whether we have already been retained and regardless of the subject matter involved, it is imperative that each of us remember the oath that we took when we were sworn in to the Maryland Bar that we would professionally and responsibly practice our craft.

As I look back on what the people in my neighborhood expected of a police officer, I realize what an awesome and authoritatively responsible position I had. I believe that if each of us looks back on our legal career we would also appreciate the tremendous authority and responsibility that comes with being an Attorney and Counselor at Law.

As we sit down at our Thanksgiving dinner and look at the lives we impact each day, I hope that each one of us can reflect on and take pride in the positive way we have influenced the lives of so many others.

I wish each of you a very Happy Thanksgiving and look forward to seeing you at the Newton White Mansion on December 9th for the Holiday Party.

Respectfully submitted,
William J. Parker, Jr

MEMORIAL SERVICE By Vince Femia

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE PRINCE GEORGE'S COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION, FRIENDS AND COLLEAGUES ALL:

This year is the twelfth year that I have had the privilege of being Chairman of the Memorial Committee. The Committee's sole function is to mark the passing of Association members by arranging, in conjunction with the Circuit Court, a memorial service on the Thursday before Thanksgiving each year.

Following in the footsteps of gentlemen such as M. Hampton Magruder, Esquire, LeRoy Pumphrey, Esquire and Jacob S. Levin, Esquire who were just some who preceded me as Chairman of this Committee, I have carried out my assignment as best I was able. It must be noted that the Committee could not have functioned without the assistance and efforts of the Association's staff and the Chair wishes to publicly acknowledge the ladies (and it has always been "ladies") and offer them my sincere thanks.

Having spent a quarter of my years before the bar as Chair and sole member of this Committee, the time has come for me to step aside and pass the privilege of remembering deceased members to another, and preferably younger, Association member. To that end I have advised President Parker that I will not be available to act as Chairman of the Committee in 2009.

But I beg your indulgence for a moment's reflection on the question that was posed to me just this past week. Why do we have a memorial service? Why indeed? Other major jurisdictions don't seem to make an effort to formally remember their departed brethren. So why do we, in Prince George's County, take time during a workweek to gather in the ceremonial courtroom for a short, but profound remembrance? I believe the answer to the question is twofold.

First, we in the legal community want the families and friends of the departed and the community at large to know that we respect our colleagues for more than just whatever legal talents they possessed.

Lawyers are not just one-dimensional. And we, their fellows, want to remember them and honor them for their involvement with their families, churches and communities outside the field of law.

Second, the purpose of holding a formal service to remember those who have died is to impress upon younger members of the legal community something that impressed me when I attended memorial services back in the sixties and seventies. All will remember you, not just for being a good lawyer, if such you are, but also for being a good person. A case in point is the recent passing of Chief Judge Loveless. He was a good lawyer and a great judge, but when people, lawyers and lay people alike, speak of him they invariably say, "He was a good man." And that's the whole point. As lawyers, our duty to the community doesn't stop at the courthouse door and we should all remember that, because others will.

And as I close, it occurs to me there is a third reason why we memorialize our departed brethren—it's the right thing to do.

LETTER TO THE PRESIDENT From Phil Nichols

Dear President Bill,

Please be kind enough to thank everyone for their kindness at the October bar meeting where the Traffic School was recognized.

The Traffic School began in the fall of 1994 and graduated its first class in December. Since then we have seen nearly a thousand new students every year who statistically are better drivers, getting fewer citations and having fewer accidents as a result. Additionally, the program has generated over $170,000 for the bar's pro bono programs.

It has been a success in every measurable way because of the support it has received from the officers and directors of the bar, the Judges of the District Court and those who were kind enough to refer students to the program. Then President Mike Whalen didn't hesitate to advance the start up funds to make this idea a reality. Pat Burley and Richard Ratcliffe were the first instructors and made the National Highway Safety Council's Defensive Driver Course our standard of instruction. Pearl LaPlaca was the first Executive Director and was nice enough to run the school from the trunk of her car and dining room table. Walter "1-800-T-School" Laake volunteered to get the 800 number that we still use. Gerry Solomon put together the first computer system to track our student body and managed to get a computer donated. The Glenn Dale Volunteer Fire Station was our first home and their co-operation through the years has kept us there. They could not be more helpful in any regard. When we had "growing pains" along the way, Past President Susan Bayly solved them. I continue to be very grateful to them and all who helped in big and small ways.

Your kindness to me personally is greatly appreciated and the bar's recognition of all those who helped through the years made for a grand evening.

Thank you.

Phil Nichols

FORECLOSURE PROJECT

Currently one of the most pressing legal need in Prince George's County, have become the prevention of home foreclosures, and the eviction of tenants leasing homes which have been foreclosed. As a result, Community Legal Services (CLS) started a Prevention of Home Foreclosures project to assist Prince George's County residents with foreclosure cases. CLS has partnered with state government agencies and other legal service providers throughout Maryland to combat the growing foreclosure crisis. This state-wide project has established a hotline where all homeowners having trouble making payments or facing foreclosure are encouraged to call. That telephone number is 1-877-462-7555. CLS has been designated to receive all phone calls pertaining to foreclosure cases in Prince George's County. Community Legal Services has over forty attorneys in private practice prepared to assist our homeowners and tenants in Prince George's County. The policy of CLS is to assist low-income homeowners who meet income guidelines set by Maryland Legal Services Corporation.

JUDICARE PROJECT

CLS continues to refer family law related legal matters, including domestic violence and guardianship of adult and children under this project with a couple of changes. We no longer require an opposing counsel to be present prior to referring the case. This change is due to the fact that domestic violence rarely has an opposing counsel until just before the hearing, and guardianships rarely have an opposing counsel. Attorneys receive $80.00 per hour up to $1,600.00 per case, with the exception of domestic violence cases where attorneys are limited to 5 hours per case.

SPANISH ORIENTATION FOR PRO SE LITIGANTS

We are pleased to announce the first Spanish Orientation for Pro Se Litigants in Prince George's County, scheduled for Saturday, November 8, 2008, 11:00 am, at the Hyattsville Library, located on 6530 Adelphi Road, Hyattsville, Maryland. The event is sponsored by the Family Division of the Circuit Court for Prince George's County, Community Legal Services, the National Family Resiliency Center, Inc., and volunteer attorneys. We plan to co-sponsor several of these Orientations through out the year 2009. Clients interested in attending the orientations are required to pre-register by calling 301-952-4840. We like to thank attorney Valerie Vance Adeyeye who volunteered to conduct the first Orientation.

Community Legal Services of Prince George's County, Inc., is a non-profit organization established to provide quality civil legal services to low-income persons in Prince George's County. It does this through the generous contribution of legal advice and legal representation by members of the private Bar. Additionally, CLS operates three free legal Clinics in the County. They are located in the in Circuit Court House, Oxon Hill, and Langley Park respectively. For more information about our services, please contact Nora C. Eidelman, at 301-864-4907, ext. 12.

CLS is Featured in the Catalogue for Philanthropy 2006-07. View our profile at: http://www.catalogueforphilanthropy-dc.org/2007/community_legal_71641.htm

ALTER EGO PROGRAM

JUDGE'S & MASTER'S

10/1/08

ALTER EGO PROGRAM

Members of the Bar - THIS PROGRAM IS FOR YOU!

If you want to critique Judges and Masters without rising to the level of making a formal complaint you may contact their alter-egos with comments, suggestions, problems or concerns you may have about a particular judge or master. The alter-ego will then contact the judge/master to whom the criticism is addressed. This gives them constructive feedback about their job performance.

It is hoped that this informal Alter-Ego Program will enhance bench/bar relations by easing conflicts and resolve everyday tensions that may arise in the courthouse.

I strongly encourage all lawyers and citizens to use this program.

An updated list of Alter-Egos is included in this newsletter. If you have any comments or suggestions about the program, you may contact me at (301) 952-4066.

GET HEALTHY TODAY by: Edith Lawson-Jackson

Understanding the components of nutrition and how proper nutrition positively impacts one's body is essential for achieving optimum health. The most basic concept regarding foods and the roles which they play is the macronutrient classification of various foods. All macronutrients provide calories for the functioning and sustenance of the body and they all also contain micronutrients such as vitamins or minerals.

There are three macronutrient groups which all foods containing calories fit into. These three groups are proteins, carbohydrates, and fats. Proteins and carbohydrates each contain seven (7) calories per gram, whereas fats contain nine (9) calories per gram of food. While the human body requires food from all three macronutrient groups, due to the higher caloric content of fats and the negative health repercussions of many fats, one should endeavor to primarily consume foods from the protein and carbohydrate food groups. However, not all fats are bad for you. Consumption of certain types of fats actually have substantial health benefits.

Fats are typically categorized as either "good" fats or "bad" fats. Bad fats, and ones which should be avoided or used sparingly, are saturated fats and trans-fats which can have harmful effects on your body. Not only do these bad fats make you fat, but they also negatively affect your health and contribute to ailments such as high cholesterol and heart disease. Saturated fats are the main food culprit for high cholesterol. They are found mostly in marbled meats, poultry that has the skin on it, and in full fat dairy products. If you find that you must give in to your craving to eat these foods, small changes can go a long way. For example, peel the skin off of your poultry even if it's grilled poultry. Eat only lean cuts of beef or trim away any visible fat from steaks. Substitute skim or 1% fat dairy products for whole milk and whole cheeses. The small difference in taste is well worth the big difference you'll notice in both your health and your waistline. And very soon, you'll get used to the small taste difference.

Transfats, the other category of "bad fat", are generally found in packaged baked goods such as crackers, chips, cookies, and cakes. They are also found in fried foods and some margarines and buttery spreads. It is extremely important to keep your intake of this most harmful type of fat to less than one percent of your total daily caloric intake. In simplified terms, this means that you should make it a practice to read labels on packaged food items. Instead of burdening yourself with doing mathematic computations in your head while reading nutrition labels, look at the ingredients on food labels and swap out choices that have these bad fats for other healthier choices. Choose plain tortilla chips over bar-b-que corn chips and potato chips. Substitute Healthy Choice Brand cookies for your standard Chips-A-Hoy. Use Promise or other "heart smart" spreads instead of margarine. And try limiting your consumption of fried food to one serving (four to six ounces) no more than once per week. You don't have to totally deprive yourself to eat healthier and improve your health. Today there are an abundance of snack food items that contain little or no fat, including cookies, cakes, and chips. Always choose these over your regular full fat snack items when snacking (but do watch for higher sugar contents in some reduced calorie foods). However, for optimum health, you should endeavor to snack on raw trail mixes, rice cakes, fresh fruit, low fat yogurt, and health bars.

Lastly, in the category of fats, we have the "good fats". These fats include foods containing heart healthy omega 3 fats, such as fish. Wild salmon is a top choice for good fats because of its high content of omega 3 fats, but other good choices include flounder, trout, tuna, and halibut. Walnuts and flax seeds are some other excellent non-fish sources of the healthy omega 3 fats. (Omega 3's can even be found in some snacks like Kashi trail mix snack bars).

Moving on to the macronutrient type of carbohydrates, "carbs" (as they are commonly referred to) are generally found in grains and in vegetables, including items such as peas, beans, and potatoes. Examples of carbs also include breakfast cereals, oatmeal, grits, and rice. Opt for whole grains as opposed to refined grains to extract more of the nutritional value from carbohydrates. That means choose brown rice over white rice and unbleached whole wheat products over white bread and white flour products. Also, choose oatmeal and grits and foods which are to be consumed in their natural states, such as sweet potatoes and baked white potatoes as healthy carbohydrate sources. The suggested foods above are generally rich in fiber and may therefore reduce constipation, as well. Further, increased fiber helps in the elimination of waste which supports weight management and lowers the risk of heart disease. Whole grains are also important sources of several B vitamins, as well as minerals such as iron, magnesium, and selenium.

Whole fruits are also a source of carbohydrate that naturally contain fiber. Though fruits should not be consumed liberally by those who are concerned primarily with weight loss, they are a healthy part of a diet and should be consumed moderately as a snack food item in place of packaged snack food items. Note should be made of the fact that fruits are naturally low in fat and calories and provide essential nutrients such as potassium and vitamin C. Potassium and sodium must be balance in order to control blood pressure and Vitamin C offers many health benefits from aiding in a strong immune system to assistance with repairing of tissues.

Proteins are the third macronutrient source and are considered by many to be most important for individuals seeking to manage their weight. For this reason, you will see an abundance of protein shakes and high protein snack bars or meal replacements not only in health food stores, but also in your local supermarket. Generally, protein sources include meats, fish, dry beans and peas, nut sand seeds, dairy products, and eggs. There is much research that suggests that a diet needs to be sufficiently high in protein in order to most effectively promote weight loss. Thus, protein should be consumed with nearly every meal each day. Further, protein serves as the building blocks for bones, muscle, cartilage, skin, and blood. Proteins generally contain B vitamins, vitamin E, iron, zinc, and magnesium. It is important to choose lean or low fat meat and poultry. Additionally, when consuming eggs, it is best to avoid consuming the yolks which contain high amounts of cholesterol and fat. Avoid processed meats such as lunch meats, ham, and sausage as much as possible. You also avoid excess sodium intake by limiting these food items. Don't be afraid to request your food to be customized when you dine out. It's easy to request an Egg Beater omelette or egg whites when you order a meal. This is not an uncommon request and I've never had anyone look at me strangely when I've made such a request. Take advantage of the abundance of pre-packaged low fat, low to moderate carb protein bars and shakes and use them as either meal replacements or low calorie snacks. Pack a bag with mixed raw nuts and raisins including pumpkin and sunflower seeds and take these to work to snack on. These are great ways to get in your protein, healthy fats, and a small amount of carbs, while avoiding overly processed items. It's easy to eat the way that best suits your needs and your health goals when you know exactly what you're putting in your mouth. So make choices that are considerate and go through the pros and cons of the macronutrients with every food item you place in your shopping cart when you're next at the grocery store. Now you're armed with knowledge!

OUR FINANCIAL PARTNER BB&T By Mia N. Pittman

WOMEN, THEIR MONEY & THE ATTORNEYS THEY TRUST

The affluent female segment of the population represents great opportunity for both financial institutions and attorneys. At BB&T, our internal studies have found that women head 40% of households with assets greater than $600k and control 51% of private wealth in our country. Most relevant, women are more likely than men to consult with trusted advisors such as their accountant, attorney and banker, particularly when facing changes in their lives that necessitate making significant decisions. Three life events/stages in particular, the death of a spouse/parent, divorce and business ownership are circumstances when women will likely engage an attorney – and could very significantly benefit from working with a financial advisor.

Widows/Adult Children of Deceased Parents & Estate Attorneys

The loss of a spouse or a parent is a highly emotional time for anyone, but can be so particularly for women. First, women many times play a major role in the caretaking of a loved one and can be additionally overwhelmed by the sometimes sudden requirement to then make major financial decisions upon their death. Secondly, the decisions made often impact other people (i.e. siblings, children, grandchildren, etc), placing an additional feeling of responsibility on the decision maker and sometimes invoking other feelings such as guilt, anxiety and second guessing – all while handling the natural grieving process. Financial advisors, like estate attorneys, can be called upon in these situations to not only provide sound advice and counsel but to also be an objective voice of reason against the backdrop of an otherwise emotional whirlwind.

Marital Shifts & Divorce Attorneys

Divorce, while having numerous emotional effects on families, also carries very real financial considerations. Women, particularly those with dependent children, are likely to experience considerable anxiety about their future and economic security. In addition, for some women, life post-marriage may be the first time that they have been in a major decision making role about the financial realities that will impact them and their families. The establishment and maintenance of trust is absolutely crucial in this life stage as clients need to know that their advisors are “on their side.” Service providers who approach these clients with the right mix of empathy and ideas will be best equipped to meet their clients’ legal, financial and emotional needs.

Business Owners & Commercial/Corporate Attorneys

Female business owners very often have sought entrepreneurship as a means of independence, rather than for its wealth creation potential. Seeing business ownership as a better way of balancing the demands of work, family and self, female business owners are more inclined and more accustomed to delegating/outsourcing the non-core business aspects of entrepreneurship thus making them ideal clients for legal and financial service providers. In addition, by definition the interplay between the clients’ personal and business lives makes their set of legal and financial needs more complex than the average client.

From a financial advisor’s perspective, the common thread that runs through all of these circumstances is the need for a comprehensive financial plan. Unlike a plan geared only towards a client’s investment portfolio, a comprehensive plan will address such other areas as tax planning, survivor income needs (life insurance), retirement planning, education funding, estate planning and business succession. Female clients at any or all of these life stages will require an objective analysis of these aspects of their financial lives. Legal advisors would serve their clients well by presenting such an idea and making a referral to a suitable financial advisor.

SCHOLARSHIP OPPORTUNITY By John Fredrickson

Most of us know high school students who are dreaming of attending college and trying their best to cobble together the money and loans that are necessary to pay for tuition, room and board. Although scholarships are available, these opportunities are too few and many are unknown to those who could benefit from them.

Because obtaining a scholarship is often the only way an otherwise qualified student can gain access to higher education, we should try to pass along information about these opportunities as best we can.

I learned recently of one such opportunity from our Local Pro Bono Committee chairperson, Manny Geraldo. The program is called, "Call Me Mister" and is devoted to providing scholarships and mentoring to African-American males who aspire to become teachers. The program is a collaboration between Clemson University and several historically black colleges in South Carolina. If you know of anyone who may be interested, have them visit the program's website at <http://www.callmemister.clemson.edu/index.htm> to obtain an application and detailed information.

If you learn of any scholarship program that would be of interest to students in our community, please let us know and we will do our best to occasionally include them in the NewsJournal. The foregoing notice is not a recommendation for the subject program, scholarship or school.
